

I alerted IMDB to the fact that everyday their headlines have a LOT uppercase/lowercase errors. I got this response:

<<Hi there,

Thank you for contacting us and sharing your thoughts about this article within our NewsDesk system.

The articles appearing on our site are created and submitted to us by our news partners. The news articles the partners have written them, for the entertainment of our users only, and they do not represent IMDb's opinions completely factual.

We encourage you to visit the site of the news partner responsible for the article in question (check the article for more information) you may have.

Thanks for your support.

Best regards,
Margot

HOWEVER...I still think the errors are done by IMDB. You guys post your own links to the original headline and it's your links that have the errors, not the original headlines by Variety, Deadline Hollywood and The Hollywood Reporter. See the screen shots below.

IMDB's headline links are in blue.

The original headlines that your link leads to are underneath the IMDB headlines.

As you can see the originals do NOT have the lowercase errors that the IMDB headlines have.

By the way, all TEN of these errors are just from ONE DAY. C'mon, you guys can do better.
